

Career Opportunities for MA Graduates

Our M.A. graduates have been diverse in their career directions. These have included:

- human services
- research
- education
- marketing
- academic positions

With the applied social research training, the Master's program gives students a focused set of credentials to offer to service agencies, government offices, and private businesses. In particular, the market for people with good research skills has been expanding, as has the requirement of both private businesses and non-profit agencies for program evaluation.
